

The curse of the mummy's mansion

The night was dark and the only noise she could hear was the sound of the squeaky wood floor under her feet, but suddenly she heard a terrible laugh and that laugh was getting closer and closer, she ran away but she ended in the corridor end and there wasn't any door in to escape and finally in all the mansion a big scream was heard.

At the next day the butler found Sara Montfield's (Lord Montfield's wife) corpse and next to her was a letter with hieroglyphics, in that letter was written: for disturb my rest all of you will die if you don't left the mansion. Curiously Akenaton's priest mummy (Lord Montfield's best treasure wasn't in his sarcophagus), the butler and the other servants left the mansion, but Lord Montfield refused and anyone have seen Lord Montfield latter.

Ten years latter a man asked Lord Montfield's butler some information about the mansion and Lord Montfield, the butler told him the same history and adveted him to don't go if he didn't want to die, but that man ignored him.

At the next day the man went to Lord Monfield's mansion to investigate. Strangely the main door was open, the men entered in the mansion and tried to go to the 1st floor (he wanted to go to the corridor where Sara died) but the all the doors in the 1st floor were close, he decided to investigate in the main floor the only door in the main floor was opened, he entered to the room and...that was amazing there were hundreds of Egyptian treasures it was like a museum and in the center of the room was the sarcophagus of Akenaton's priest but the mummy wasn't anywhere, in that room there also were two doors and the two were opened in the first room were also a lot of Egyptian treasures and in the second the same, but in the second room were two doors one was open the man entered in that room was a storage room he bented to find something, he suddenly watched to the mirror and saw reflected the mummy walking in the other room, fortunately the mummy recoiled and didn't enter in the storage room, the man wasn't alone, a minutes later he found a key, he tried to open the close door in the second room and he succeeded, that door lead to an office there wasn't any door in the office but he search for clues, he twist radiator's valve and a secret passage opened, he cross the passage and he appeared in a library, there were stairs to go to the 1st floor, he went up stairs and opened the first floor door, there was a corridor whit six doors, the five first were open but the last was closed, in the first was the bathroom, in the second a bedroom, in the third was a living room, in that room there was a family tree and the was rounded Lord Montfield's cousin name: Jason Parker, near the name was written murder , traitor, could be only Jason Parker disguised and not a real mummy. He continued to the next door and there was another office and in a chair was a corpse, Lord Monfield's corpse, suddenly he heard a voice -run away, run away- (it could be Lord Montfiel's ghost adverting him), when he was going to left that room he saw a strange clock, he opened the clock to saw its mechanism, it was a bomb, but fortunately wasn't active. In the last door was a corridor whit a Tutankamon statue at the end, that was the corridor where Sara died, he watch carefully the statue and saw that the beard was at the left not in the center he move it and the statue opened, it was a door, there were stairs, he went down stairs and finished in a winery, there was a little door, he open it and finished in a laboratory, there was another door, he opened and there was an Egyptian burial chamber and there was another corpse he watched it carefully and saw Jason Parker's name, he was Jason, he heard another voice -leave that house if you don't want to die-, and suddenly he heard a noise like gears moving and immediately an explosion. He returned to the lab and tried to escape through the winery but it was in fire but the explosion made some holes in the laboratory's ceiling through he could escape he crossed one and finished in first floor's office he tried to escape through the door but it was locked, did the mummy luck it, he escaped by the passage and went to the first floor. The man was in the main corridor, and now all the doors were opened, when he heard a laugh getting closer and closer, he entered in the office who was beginning to be consumed by flames and he took the boom clock and activated it, he was getting out of the corridor when another door opened. and the mummy appeared, he run away to leave the mansion and he succeeded he throw the bomb to the mansion reception and locked the door when the mummy almost at the door, he run away and the bomb exploded. He went back to saw who was really the mummy, but he only found headbands and a letter, in that letter was written: If you tell this to someone you will die.

You might be probably wondering why I know it...

You must know it.

HaHaHaHaHaHaHaHaHaHaHaHaHaHaHaHa